YWCA History

In 1855 Mary Jane Kennard and a few friends opened a home in Fitzroy Square London to board Nurses getting ready for the war. Soon they united with Emma Roberts prayer groups of young women to be known as the Young Women Christian Association.. This organization spread quickly to other parts of the world and today it is the oldest and largest national and international organization. There are YWCA's in 95 countries on all continents of the world. They are involved in working on a variety of issues affecting their community.

For more than 150 years YWCA USA has served as a beacon of light for women and girls. Dedicated to their empowerment. To these ends, through a broad base of social services and advocacy, the YWCA dismantles barriers faced by women, girls, and people of color as they work to develop and sustain healthy lives.
